

Here is my first draft of storyboard about the Project 4.

I am focus on what they may do during the playing process if I make this game for them.

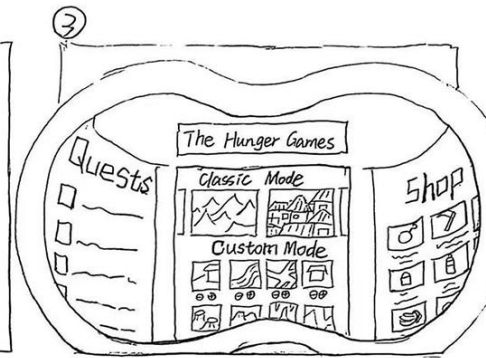

My friend discussed the zombie with me before. If our users are starving zombies in future, and they have no food to eat, because there is no living person in that world, so they turn to the VR game to search their meal...

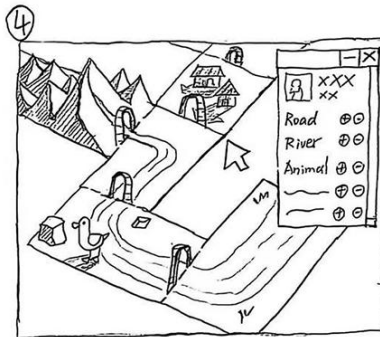

1 The last living person vanished in the real world.

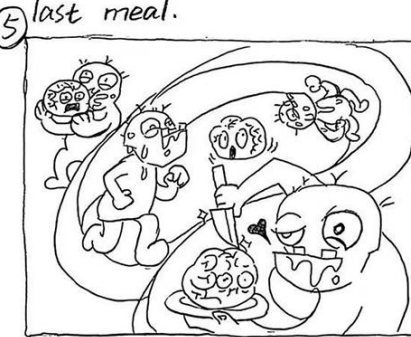

2 After that, the zombies turned to the VR world for their last meal.

3 They opened a VR game

4 They adjusted the game settings.

5 Rewards obtained.
Awaiting next round.
No victory, no end.

6 They forever live ...
in a satisfied dream.

Here is my second draft of storyboard about the Project 4

In this version, I start to image some details of this game, such as the menu, the environment of that. I believe my users will be addicted in this game, even though the dinners are not real.

Hunger Game

The last living person was vanished.

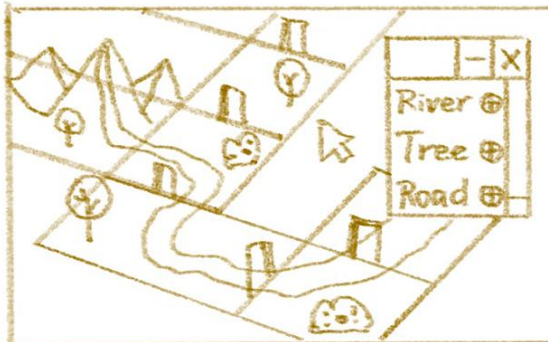

The starving zombie escaped into the VR game.

They can eat "virtual brain" here.

But they must reach the end before eat brain.

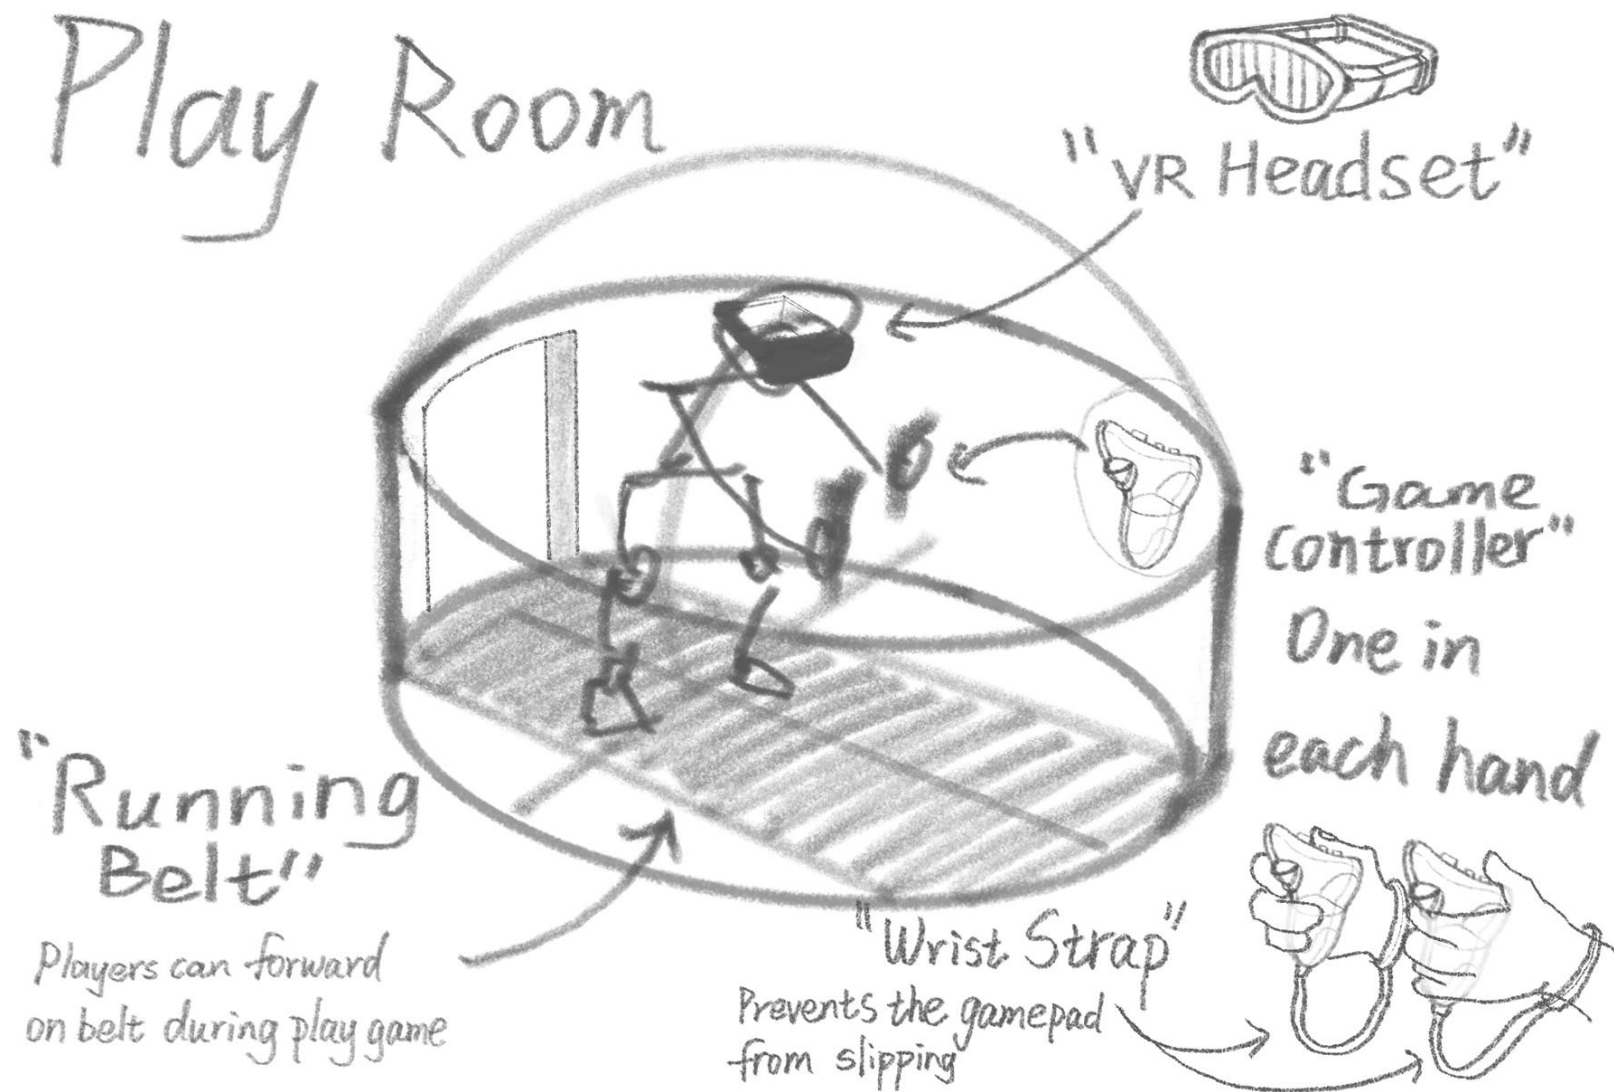

They can adjust the setting to make the game easy or more difficult.

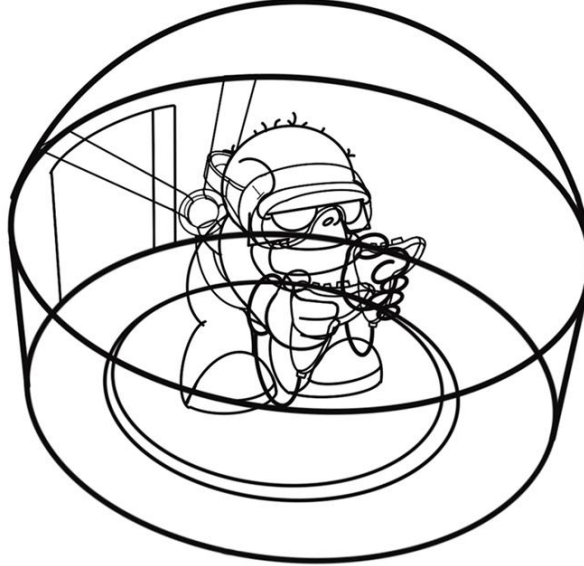

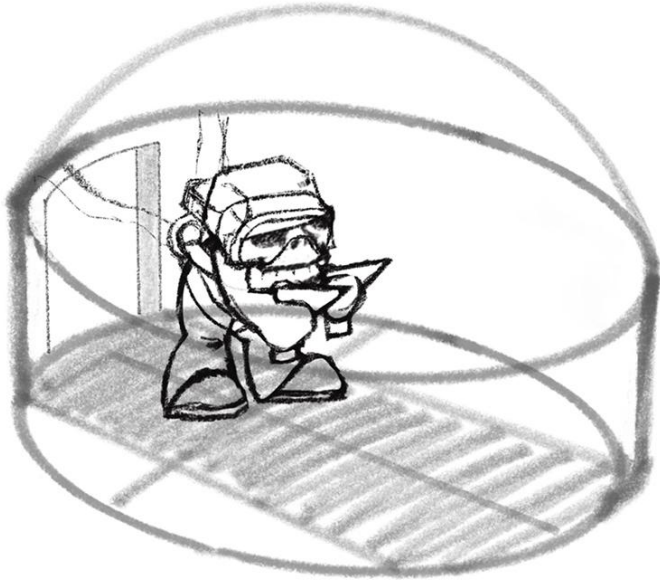

But they never feel full, even they get the "virtual brain."

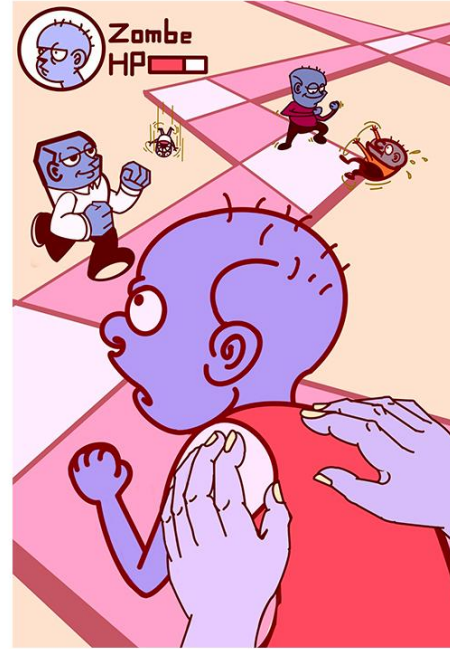

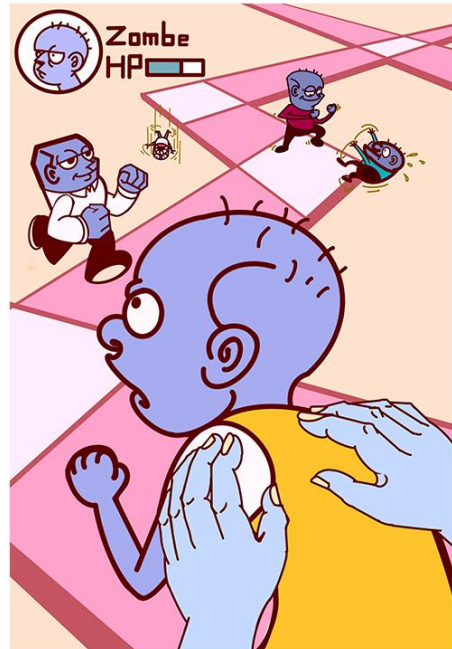

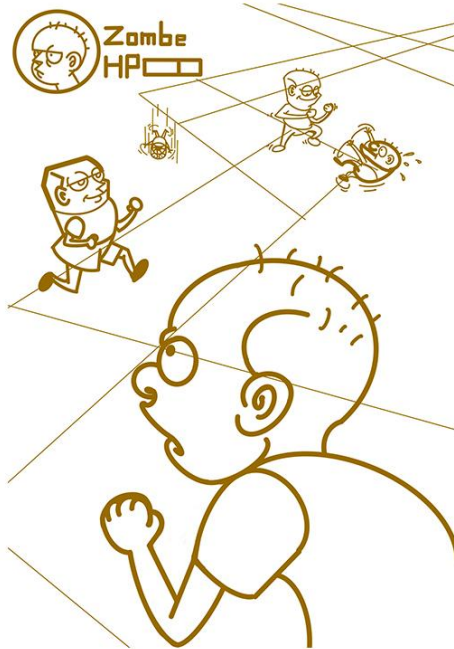

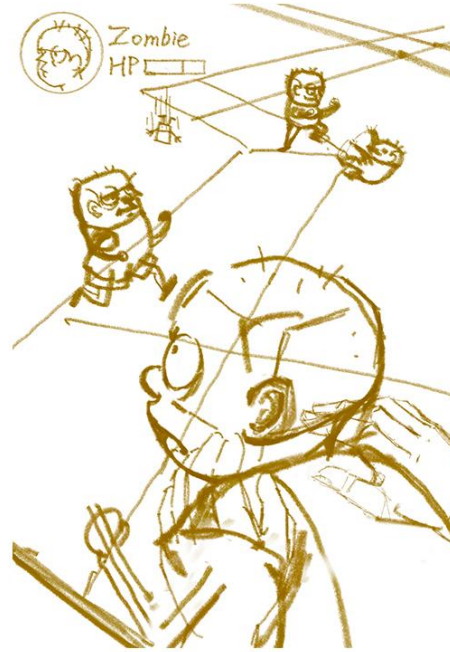

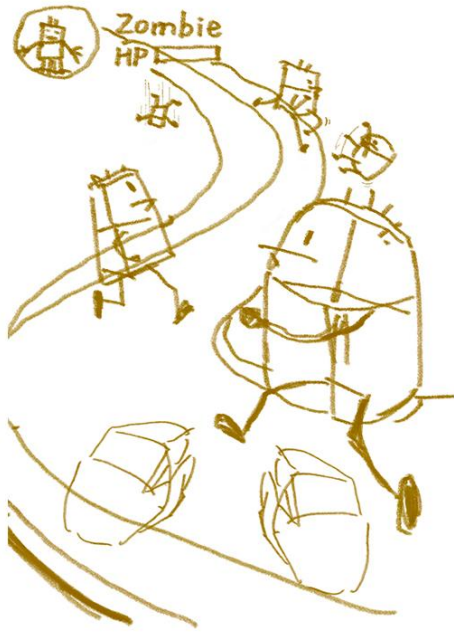

Here is my final version of the storyboard

Draft of zombie user play the VR game in a playroom.

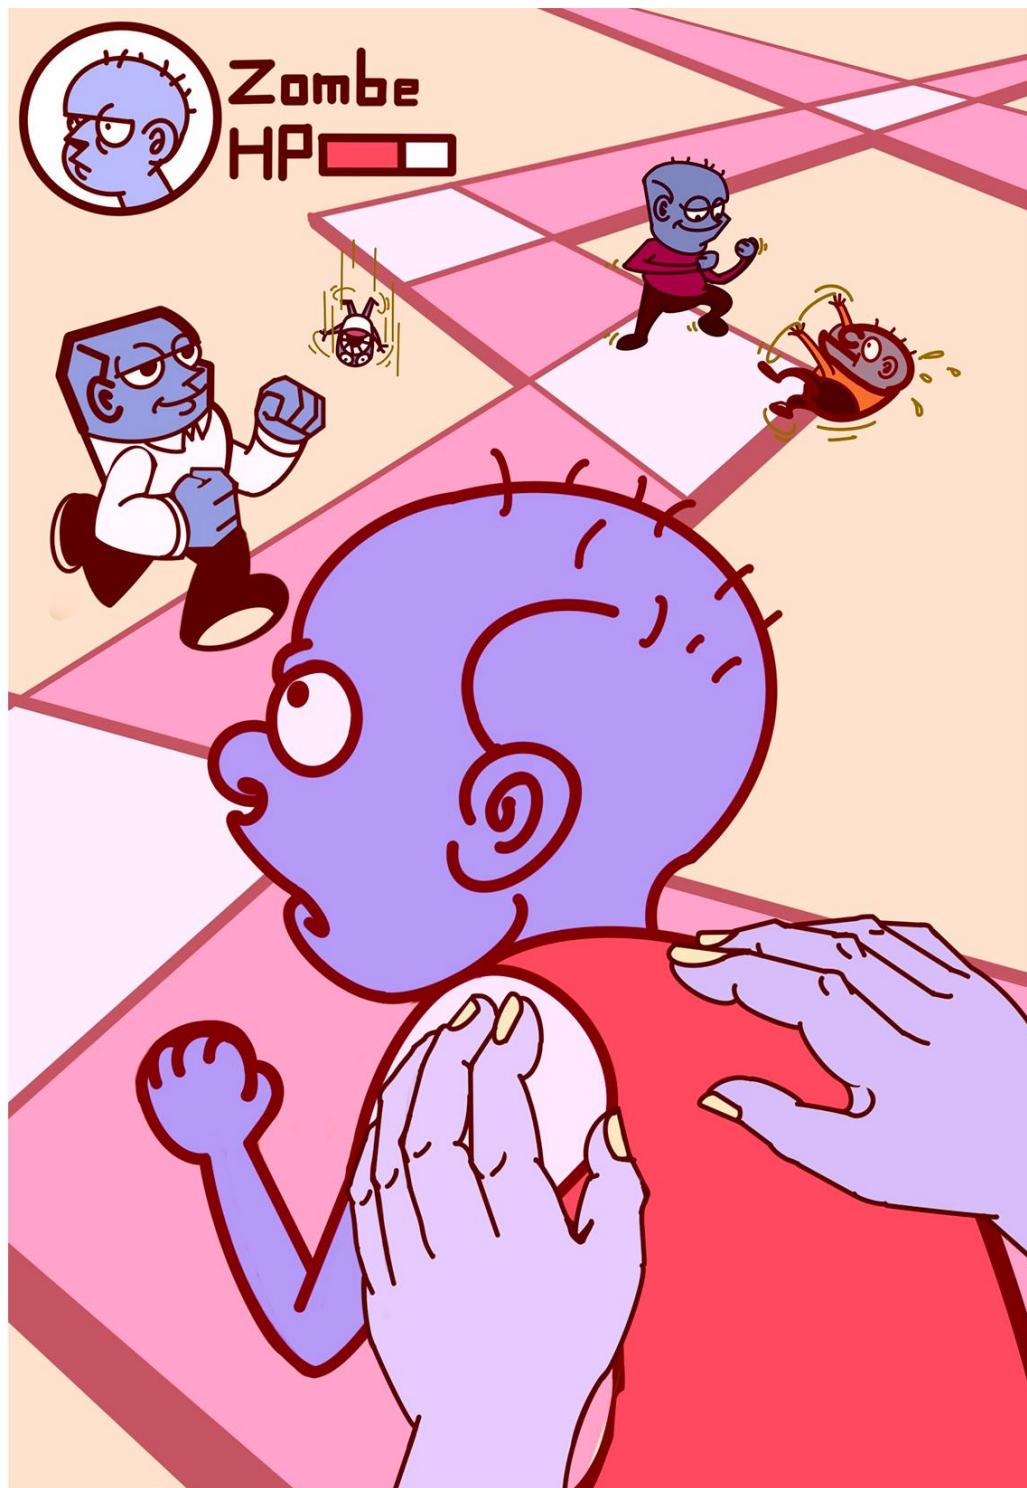

The zombie user is wearing VR sets, holding a pair of game controllers, the user also wear a seat belt for safety, because this user will running in the playroom, and I added a treadmill under the user 's feet, so that my user can play the game more conviniently.

Here is my drawing process.

I imagine they will have competition in the game.

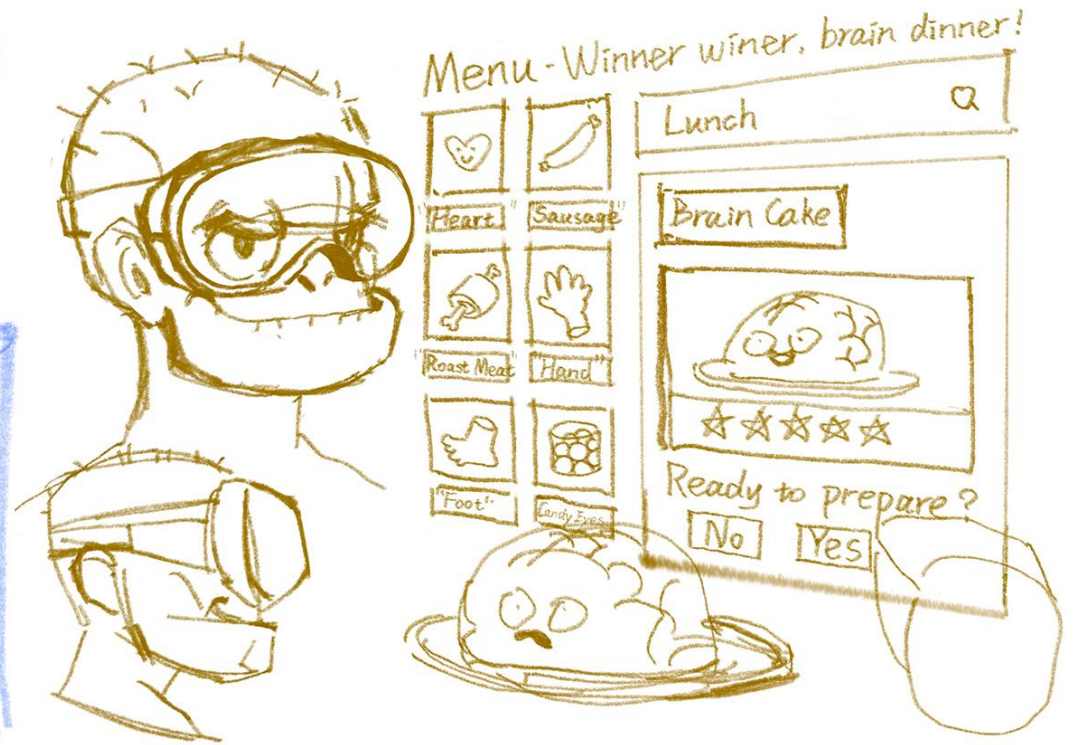

Game: "Fall Guy"

The game may be like the "Fall Guys".

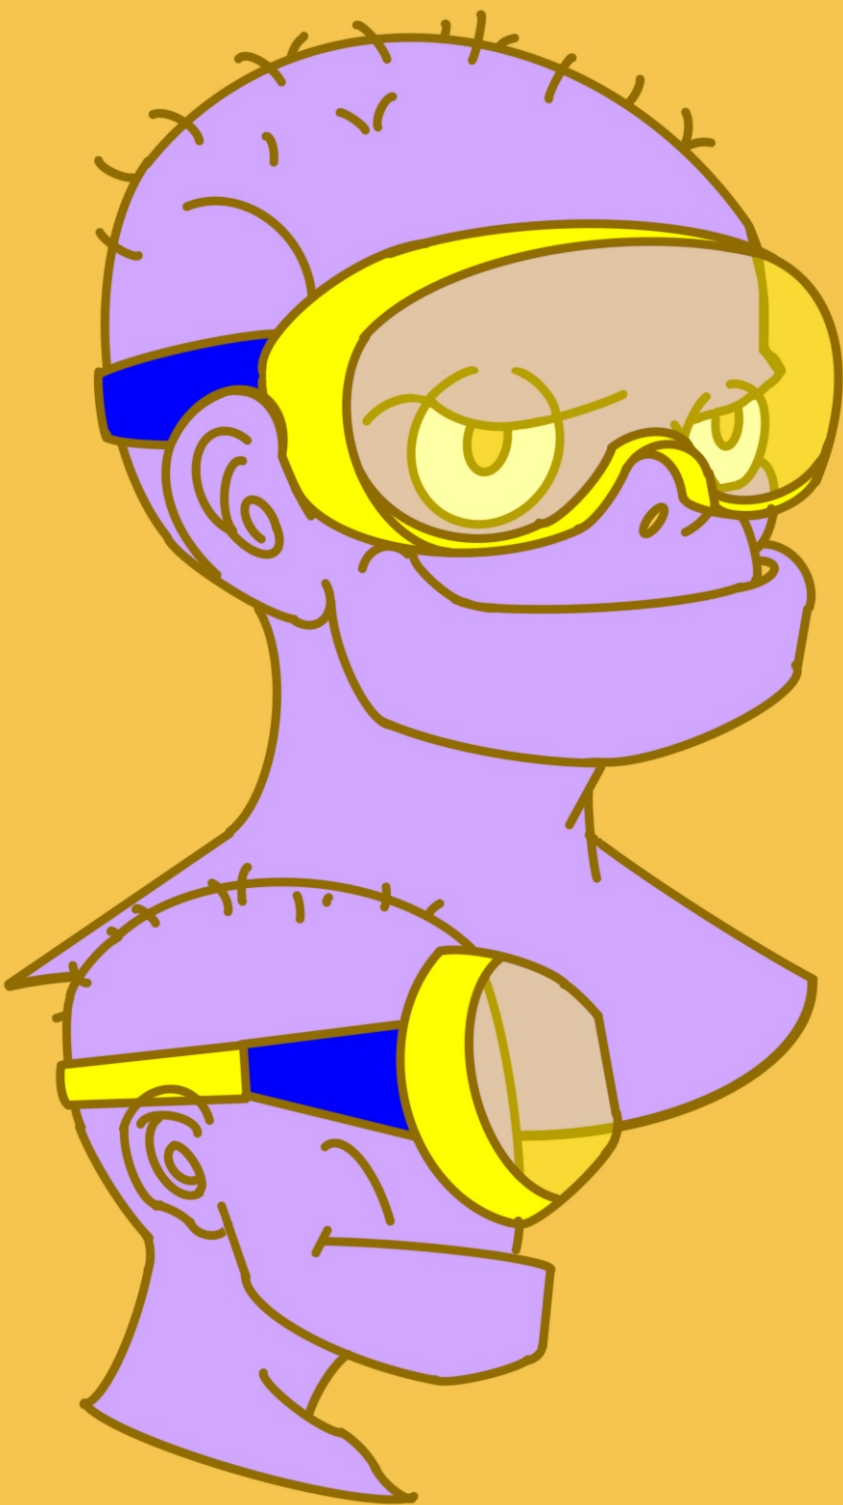

That is a popular multiplayer online game where players control a variety of cute characters and participate in various competitive challenges.

I also was looking through the "Fall Guys" for inspiration.

If a zombie player become the champion in this game, they can cook the food in their favorite way, and the sentence will appear in the menu.

"Win Winner, brain dinner!"

Menu: Winner winner, brain dinner!
